

Open Call:

Clancy Quay Studios/Superprojects Professional Development programme 2022/23

Deadline: Monday 12 September 2022 at 5.30pm

Superprojects and Clancy Quay Studios are pleased to announce an Open Call for participants to the 2022/23 Professional Development Programme for recent graduate artists.

In 2022 the programme will collaborate with the National College of Art and Design and Munster Technological University Crawford School of Art and Design to deliver a full programme designed to teach recent graduates the skills necessary to navigate confident and successful careers as visual artists.

Now in its fourth year, this professional development series gives recent graduates from all fine art courses across the country the opportunity to access knowledge, training and feedback from Ireland's leading experts in the visual arts, who will offer bi-weekly seminars, gallery and studio visits, mentoring and feedback sessions, with knowledge sharing and peer to peer collaborations encouraged. Themes of seminars include subjects such as time management, how to approach artists talks and presentations, studio visits and networking, how to write excellent applications, tax and finance for artists, documenting your work and more. Beginning in October 2022, the programme will include in person day long meetings, site and studio visits in both Dublin and Cork as well as a series of online seminars and in person and online one on one mentoring sessions.

As well as providing training and practical information, participants on the series will be given the opportunity to access one on one advice clinics with curators and arts professionals. At the end of the series, participants will have developed a strong peer network as well as increased knowledge and confidence in how to proceed and thrive in their careers as visual artists, bridging the gap between University and the professional world.

Superprojects is an organisation which works exclusively with children and young people, and with this in mind, we accept applications from artists who are at or below the age of 23 on 1st June 2022. 15 places will be awarded based on merit and need, following the receipt of the completed application form. About Superprojects

Superprojects is an initiative for young audiences that generates possibilities for creative encounters with contemporary art and artists. Funded by The Arts Council, Superprojects' work includes school-based workshop and artist-residencies, commissions and other programmes that open up the richness of national and international contemporary art practice to young participants; whilst actively fostering their development as meaning-makers and artists.

About Clancy Quay Studios

Clancy Quay Studios is an initiative of the National College of Art and Design (NCAD) Access programme. In partnership with Kennedy Wilson, the Clancy Quay Studios offers a one year studio residency to up to 5 recent graduates from NCAD. Since 2020, the Clancy Quay Studio Project has been partnering with Superprojects to deliver a Professional Development Programme, providing an innovative suite of entrepreneurial and professional development supports to the studio residency awardees at Clancy Quay, and a wider group of recent graduates from across the country.
